

At first I thought, how could they impliment something that we are not sure weather cell phones interfere with the cockpits signals? I justified this by saying. I too must learn from my mistakes. Then I thought, It's not safe because people would not be paying attention. I can justify this by saying "we let people drink alcohol seated in the exit rows. Passengers should not be forced to think about safety. That's what the flight attendants are for. My last thought was this can just cause increaed irritability with passengers already in each others space. When you are unable to move from the person who is next to you...It is not the appropriate place for this flexibility and I can't justify it.
